Beverly Hills Mayor Nancy Krasne has told The Courier exclusively that the City has retained the services of Jeff Kolin as its new City Manager. Kolin is currently the city manager of Santa Rosa, Calif. The selection was approved unanimously by the City Council.

The appointment comes at the conclusion of a three-month nationwide search conducted on behalf of the City by Heather Renschler of Ralph Andersen & Associates.

Mayor Krasne had appointed Councilmen Barry Brucker and Dr. William Brien to serve as the ad-hoc committee tasked with supervising the search. More than 70 applicants from the entire United States including Florida, Illinois and Nevada were considered in the selection process, as reported in the Oct. 23 edition of The Courier.

Kolin was appointed as City Manager for the City of Santa Rosa on August 21, 2000. His career in local government began 33 years ago in Southern California in a part-time job while he attended California State University Long Beach where he received both a B.A. and an M.A. in Sociology, according to the City of Santa Rosa's website.

Prior to joining Santa Rosa, Kolin was City Manager for the City of Pittsburg, California, and Deputy City Manager for the City of Santa Clarita, California.

His career has included several opportunities to be involved in unique local government projects and assignments, such as the Santa Clara River Recreation and Trail Master Plan, construction of the Pittsburg Civic Center and Public Safety Building, Santa Rosa's Prince Memorial Greenway, and the formation of municipal gas and electric utilities. Kolin is President of the City Managers' Department of the League of California Cities, a member of the Board of the California City Managers' Foundation, and an International City/County Managers' Association Credentialed Manager. He is a member of the Sonoma, Lake, Mendocino United Way Board of Directors, and he is an active Rotarian.

Details of Kolin's contract are not available at this time. The Courier will update this story in Friday's edition.
